

The George M. Miller House November 5, 2005

Written by Marc Bates

Above is a photograph of The George M. Miller House. It is also known as the College President's House. Our class took a tour of this three story building and it is beautiful!

The name of this house is the George M. Miller house. It was constructed in 1914. This house is 96 years old. The address of this house is 503 Tamiami trail U. S. Highway 41 South Ruskin, Florida 33570. Now the house is used by The Woman's Club of Ruskin. Sometimes it is used for church meeting's. This house is a beautiful home.

It is good to save these houses because it will preserve history so if you save these houses you will be saving history.

The structure of the George M. Miller house is bold and outstanding. The color of the house fits it well, it is gray and white. The house was built for a college president of Ruskin College. The college is no longer here, most of the college buildings burned down. The architecture of the George M. Miller house is a bungalow style. The same people that built the L. L. Dickman house built the George M. Miller House. Dr. George M. Miller owned the house from 1914 until his death in 1918. After he died the school was forced to close down.

The George M. Miller house burned in the year 1919. The Miller House did not burn though. The house is well preserved. It is being well taken care of by The Ruskin Woman's Club.
